ROMMEL ACQUIRES CRANSTON MECHANICAL and ELECTRICAL DIVISIONS

HUNT VALLEY, MD (September 12, 2011)

Rommel Engineering & Construction, Inc. announced today that it has acquired, through an asset purchase, the Mechanical and Electrical Divisions of L H Cranston and Sons, Inc. The purchase was made through a wholly owned subsidiary, Rommel Cranston Construction LLC. Rommel previously completed the acquisition of the Service Division of L H Cranston and Sons, Inc. With the sale of these two divisions, L H Cranston and Sons, Inc. ceased all operations.

L H Cranston and Sons, Inc. provided high quality commercial, industrial and institutional mechanical and electrical contracting services throughout Maryland and the Washington Metro area, for over 60 years. According to Leon Bromley, President of Rommel Engineering & Construction, Inc., "Together with our earlier acquisition of Cranston's Service Division, the addition of Cranston's Mechanical and Electrical Divisions makes the combined Rommel Cranston a premier specialty trades contractor capable of delivering the highest quality electrical and mechanical services throughout our region."

Rommel Engineering & Construction, Inc., which was formed in 1988, specializes in highway lighting and signals work, as well as commercial and institutional electrical contracting. For additional information contact Leon Bromley 301-912-5740.
